During the preparation of pickled olives, the olives are placed in drums in alternating layers of olive and salt. These drums are turned at certain intervals. This ensures that the added salt comes into contact with all surfaces of the olives. The pickled olives bending on the branches become sweetened.

In the processes, since it does not wilt, their surfaces become even more wrinkled. At the same time, together with the added salt, the olive's own inside also drains out, so the aroma of pickled olives is somewhat stronger than that of brined olives.

During storage of bulk products, its taste and appearance. to preserve it, the can must be turned upside down at least every 15 days.
